

March 25th & April 8th 2014

What time? 5:45pm to 8:15pm, on both dates

Where? Coach House, rooms 100 & 200

Do I need to register? No, just join us!

Refreshments and light snacks will be served!

The 2013-14 PhD Pro-seminar class invites you to their two-day symposium:

*The End of Innovation?
Moving Education Research
Forward in the New Millennium*

Theorists such as Dewey and Freire revolutionized thinking about how we teach and how students learn, and about the aims of education. However, as classrooms change, reflecting new modes of globalization, diversity and technology, we wonder: Are these theories still relevant? Can we produce new theories?

Our conference seeks to create a space for the latest DISE PhD student cohort to present their findings in a variety of areas related to educational research and practice. This exciting event promises to be an intellectually stimulating and highly engaging endeavour for both researchers and practitioners!

For more information, please email us at: chloe.garcia@mail.mcgill.ca or arzina.zaver@mail.mcgill.ca

