NEW COURSE

RELIGION IN MODERN CHINA

EAST 303

Instructor: Daniel Murray

WINTER 2018
TUESDAYS AND THURSDAYS
9:35AM – 11:05AM. BIRKS 105

This course introduces religion in Mainland China from the end of the Qing Dynasty to the present. The aim is to give students an overall perspective of the role religious activities (and movements against religious groups) played in the development of modern China as well as issues relating to religion in contemporary China. It begins with a historical overview and then focuses on a different theme each week to consider the relationships that diverse religious practices have with politics, social life, urbanization, gender, ethnicity, media, and so on.
