Expanding Art Experiences in Early Childhood

Presented by

Sheryl Gilman

April 7, 2009 | Best Western, 3407 Peel St. | Time: 9:30-3:30

A make-and-take workshop for teachers of 4-6 year olds

Art has traditionally been a significant component of early childhood programs. Friedrich Froebel, the father of kindergarten, alleged that young students should be involved not only in creating their own art but also in enjoying the art of others. Rich art experiences are significant in the development of the whole child as well as providing a means towards respecting other people and cultures.

Many samples of children’s work will inspire this hands-on make-and-take workshop.

You will learn:

- techniques to engage children in art expression and appreciation.
- a useful framework that lends itself to cross-curricular components
- practical strategies for evaluation and assessment

Sheryl Gilman has been involved in early childhood education for the past 20 years. Her major area of expertise focuses on implementing change, literacy, parent and school collaboration and transmitting pertinent elements of the Reggio Emilia Approach into North American classrooms. Sheryl continues to teach four and five year old children and is the Director and Coordinator of the early childhood programs of Solomon Schechter Academy. Sheryl is also the Reggio Emilia consultant for Step by Step Family Center in Kahnawake.
