LEONARD LEOPOLD MACKALL (1879 - 1937)
THE ANONYMOUS FOURTH EDITOR OF THE BIBLIOTHECA

n view of the fact that 1954 marked the twenty-fifth anniversary of the publication of the Bibliotheca Osleriana, Dr. W.W. Francis was asked at the time to write a brief note about that monumental work. In it he described the respective roles of the editors as follows: "My part was that of chief editor, one among several successive collaborators. We learned more than the technicalities of our job from one of them, Mr. R.H. Hill, then of the Bodleian and now director of the National Central Library in London; another was Archibald Malloch whose death last year is so widely deplored. When deafness threatened his promising clinical career at Montreal, he became the distinguished librarian of the New York Academy of Medicine. An anonymous fourth was an old friend from my 'teens on, that quaint and erudite wizard, L.L. Mackall, whom Garrison called Osler's bibliographic sleuth-hound — he seemed to know the whereabouts, history, and prospects of any and every rare book. Dear old Leonard! Some of us have difficulty deciphering our own script, but you always carried a typewriter and could even make that illegible!"

Now another twenty-five years have passed and we have reached the fiftieth anniversary of the publication of the Bibliotheca Osleriana. On this occasion it seems approp-riate to remind readers of the Newsletter that there was in the person of Mr. L.L. Mackall an editor of the Bibliotheca whose modesty prevented him from allowing his name to be added to those of his editorial colleagues. Francis has stated that he pleaded with Mackall to let him put his name with those of the other three editors at the end of the preface but Mackall professed to believe that his services did not justify it. However he could not prevent his name from appearing in the Bibliotheca as a donor or contributor of a bibliographic note, although Mackall did object to it occurring at all frequently. He had indeed been Osler's "bibliographic sleuth-hound" but his services to the Bibliotheca were more extensive than that. He read and criticized all the proofs, writing about them lengthy letters described by Hill as them-

It is of interest to recall how Mackall, who was not a physician, met Osler. Born in Baltimore in 1879, Mackall had received his preliminary education at Lawrenceville School from which institution he graduated in 1896. After a year in Europe he enrolled as an undergraduate in Arts at Johns Hopkins, attaining his A.B. in 1900. While at Hopkins as an undergraduate he became familiar with virtually everyone in the University who was interested in books. Among them was Francis who was then also a student at Hopkins and it was Francis who introduced Mackall to Osler. This was around 1900 and from then until Osler's death in 1919 the association between Mackall and Osler was very close. Some idea of the affection which Osler inspired in Mackall may be gained from the following excerpt from a letter written by Mackall to Osler June 28th, 1919 in anticipation of Osler's seventieth birthday. Addressing it to "Dear, Dear Chief," Mackall wrote, "No one could possibly be more universally admired and beloved by his friends — or more often thought of by them. If there were only more that we could do to give you pleasure! I hope that you will be able to think of something that I could do for you. Try, please." Clearly Mackall's subsequent editorial work on the Bibliotheca was a labour of love.

His enrichment of Osler's collections of books by frequent gifts and his editorial work on the Bibliotheca were not his only Oslerian services. He also played an important part in preparing for publication Osler's lectures on "The Evolution of Modern Medicine" delivered at Yale University in April 1913, a task which Osler had not been able to complete. Fielding H. Garrison, in his preface to this volume, refers to Mackall's "zeal and persistence in the painstaking verification of citations and references".

To this point, Mackall's association with Osler has been given most of the emphasis. Other aspects of his career should be mentioned. He became thoroughly familiar with Goethe's writings; this led to many publications. He brought together the most complete collection of Servetus literature ever to be assembled. He clarified a number of subjects connected with the history and literature of Georgia, the state which became his home. Once a week for thirteen years he wrote an article of some 1500 words for the "Notes for Bibliophiles" page in the "Books" section of the Sunday issue of the New York Herald Tribune. One of these articles was devoted to an account of the official opening of the Osler Library in May 1929, a ceremony which Mackall attended. He served as President of both the Bibliographic Society of America and the Georgia Historical Society. He was Honorary Consultant in Bibliography to the New York Academy of Medicine. He built up a remarkable personal library, comprising approximately twelve thousand volumes; the greater part of this he left to Johns Hopkins.

The historiated letter on this page is reproduced from Michael Servetus, De Trinitatis Erroribus Libri Septem [Hagenau: J. Setzer], 1531. Bibl. Osol. 7765. Added to the Osler Collection as a gift from Leonard L. Mackall, Savannah, Georgia, 1924.
To this rather incomplete account of his full life should be added that he was a most generous bibliophile. He seemed to be familiar with the holdings of countless libraries and individuals and he took delight in contributing gifts of rare books to fill gaps in their collections. Dr. John Fulton, in a perceptive appreciation, remarked that Leonard Mackall believed that every rare book should be in the collection best calculated to promote scholarship. Thus, although his services to Osler and Oslerians were great indeed, his influence spread far and wide throughout the world of scholarship, medical and non-medical alike.

THE OFFICIAL OPENING OF THE OSLER LIBRARY

MAY 29, 1929

When in 1954 Dr. W. W. Francis was given an opportunity to reminisce briefly about the official opening of the Osler Library, he devoted only one sentence to this event. He wrote, "It is twenty-five years since the Osler Library was formally opened at McGill on 29 May 1929, the hottest day in the memory of the participants, particularly those functioning in academicals." Dr. Francis characteristically refrained from painting a glowing picture of a ceremony in which he himself, as Osler Librarian and chief editor of the Bibliotheca Osleriana, had played a prominent role. Modesty in such matters was one of his endearing qualities. The account presented here may not be glowing but it is intended to be sufficiently detailed to do justice to this unique milestone in the history of the Osler Library and to indicate the importance attached to the ceremony marking the formal acceptance by McGill University of Sir William Osler's bequest.

The official opening or dedication, as it was called in the printed program, took place before an audience of some 350 invited guests on the afternoon of May 29, 1929 in the Assembly Hall of the Strathcona Medical Building, two floors below the newly completed Osler Library. The presiding officer was the Chancellor of McGill University, Mr. E. W. Beatty, better known in later years as Sir Edward Beatty. With him on the platform were Sir Arthur Currie, Principal of McGill University; the Right Honourable William Lyon Mackenzie King, Prime Minister of Canada; Dr. C. F. Martin, Dean of the McGill Medical Faculty; Canon Emile Chartier, Vice-Rector of the University of Montreal; Professor W. S. Thayer of The Johns Hopkins University; and the Very Reverend Arthur Carlisle, Anglican Dean and Rector of Montreal.

After an invocation by Dean Carlisle, Dr. Francis gave a detailed account of the origin and growth of the Library and told how Sir William had come to leave his books to his old college. It is of interest to recall that the first copy of the Bibliotheca to reach Montreal had arrived only a few weeks earlier. The ceremony of May 29 was attended by the three who had assisted Dr. Francis in the monumental task of preparing this catalogue of the Osler Library. They were Mr. Reginald H. Hill of Oxford, Mr. Leonard L. Mackall of Savannah, Georgia, and Dr. T. Archibald Malloch of New York. The Board of Curators of the Osler Library had held its first meeting just prior to the ceremony and at that meeting Dr. Malloch, then Librarian of the New York Academy of Medicine, was elected a Curator "in view of his intimate connection with the Donor [Sir William Osler] and of his work on the Library and its catalogue."

To return to the proceedings at the official opening, Dr. Francis was followed by Dr. William Sydney Thayer, the principal guest speaker. At that time, Dr. Thayer was Emeritus Professor of Medicine at The Johns Hopkins University and Visiting Physician to The Johns Hopkins Hospital. He had had a long and intimate association with Sir William Osler commencing in 1890 when he became Osler's assistant resident at the recently founded Johns Hopkins Hospital and subsequently his resident from 1891 to 1898. A superb clinician, a polished speaker, a keen student of fine literature with a special love of poetry and a considerable command of languages, both classic and modern, Dr. Thayer was well suited to his task. He delivered an elegantly worded and touching appreciation of Osler and his much loved books.

After the completion of Dr. Thayer's address, Osler's bequest was formally presented to McGill University by Mr. Henry Smith Osler, K.C. acting on behalf of the Osler family. Mr. Osler was the eldest son of the Honourable Sir William Osler, Featherston Osler and thus a nephew of Sir William. At the suggestion of Lady Osler, Featherston Osler had been appointed a Curator of the Osler Library in 1921 but had died three years later. His son Henry had been chosen to replace him as a Curator and, at the ceremony, was the senior representative of the Osler family. Mr. Osler's formal presentation, Sir Arthur Currie accepted the gift on behalf of McGill University and in a graceful speech made it clear how well he understood the value to the University of the Osler tradition and the Osler Library.

Several congratulatory messages had been received and these were read by Dr. C. F. Martin, who as Dean of the McGill Medical Faculty was Chairman of the Board of Curators of the Osler Library. They included greetings from the Osler Club of London, "written on vellum, illuminated, and sumptuously bound," and from the Curators of the Bodleian Library, "specially printed by the Oxford Press on one side of a large sheet of paper.
rolled and cased® and brought from Oxford by Mr. R. H. Hill, the official delegate of the Bodleian at the opening of the Osler Library.

The ceremony closed with a Benediction pronounced by the Very Reverend Dean Carlisle and following this the guests visited the Osler Library and viewed the exhibits with Dr. Francis had arranged.

There is no doubt that the official opening ceremony was a success but there was one sad circumstance which made it less successful than had been hoped. When the plans were first laid, it was expected that Lady Osler would attend and make the presentation on behalf of the Osler family. The remarks of the speakers showed that all were deeply conscious of the shadow cast upon the ceremony by her death the previous year. Mr. H.S. Osler ably represented the Osler family and his presence was most welcome. Equally welcome was the presence of several other members of Sir William and Lady Osler’s families, including Lady Osler’s sister, Mrs. H.B. Chapin. But of course no one could take the place of Lady Osler.

On Tuesday, 29 May the Osler Library will hold a symposium entitled “Books, Manuscripts, and the History of Medicine.” The intent is to draw together people with an interest in libraries, bibliography, and the history of medicine. Since these were primary interests of Sir William Osler, the fiftieth anniversary of the Osler Library seems an appropriate time to examine in what ways they still occupy common ground. Towards this end five scholars are preparing papers for a general audience of historians, librarians, bibliographers, and all other interested persons.

The scholars are:

Estelle Brodman, Librarian and Professor of Medical History, Washington University School of Medicine.

Richard J. Durling, Institut für Geschichte der Medizin und Pharmazie der Christian-Albrechts-Universität, Kiel.

Eric Freeman, Librarian, Wellcome Institute for the History of Medicine, London.

Charles G. Roland, Jason A. Hannah Professor of the History of Medicine, McMaster University, Hamilton, Ontario.

G. Thomas Tanselle, Vice President, John Simon Guggenheim Memorial Foundation, New York.

The program:

9:00 - 9:15 Greetings and introductions

10:15 - 11:15 Richard J. Durling: Medico-Historical Research in Mediaeval and Renaissance Manuscripts

11:15 - 11:30 Coffee

11:30 - 12:30 Estelle Brodman: Looking Forward Into Historical Medical Bibliography

12:30 - 2:00 Lunch

2:00 - 3:00 G. Thomas Tanselle: Physical Bibliography in the Twentieth Century

3:00 - 3:15 Coffee.

3:15 - 4:15 Eric Freeman: Medical Historians, Librarians and Bibliographers: Will They Ever Meet?

4:15 - 4:30 Closing remarks

4:30 - 6:00 Informal social hour

Everyone is cordially invited to attend this symposium. There will be no registration fees. Financial support is being given by the Jason A. Hannah Institute for the History of Medicine, Toronto; Faculty of Graduate Studies and Research, McGill University; and the Friends of the Osler Library. Further information may be obtained by writing Philip M. Teigen, Osler Librarian, Osler Library, 3655 Drummond Street, Montreal, Quebec H3G 1Y6. Tel.: (514) 392-4329.
1978-79 CONTRIBUTORS TO THE FRIENDS OF THE OSLER LIBRARY

The Library gratefully acknowledges the support it received from Friends both old and new who have responded to the appeal for funds for the 1978-79 academic year. In this academic year, to date, 247 Friends have contributed a total of $4,624.84. The names of Friends whose contributions are received after January 31, 1979 will be listed in the June issue.
