

Dr. Audrey Juras is a Faculty Lecturer in the Department of Family Medicine at McGill University. She earned her B.Sc. and M.D., C.M. degrees from McGill University in Montreal. During her residency training in Family Medicine at McGill, she obtained additional training in psychiatry and maternal-child health. Since graduation, Dr. Juras has worked in many areas of medicine, but has concentrated on all aspects of urban practice and work in teaching units and at McGill. In her fifteen years as academic staff, she has participated in varied number of activities including all levels of teaching, admissions, evaluations, examinations, faculty development and, notably, many years as a devoted Osler Fellow in the longitudinal Physician Apprenticeship course. Administratively, she has been president of the CMDP at CLSC Metro, and most recently has been leading CLSC Metro through a time of significant systems change. Dr. Juras' special interests have always included health economics, medical ethics, policy, and community building. In the year leading to her taking on the position of Director of Faculty Development, Dr. Juras began to focus her energy as a member of the Faculty Development committee. She enthusiastically assumes the leadership role of this committee, building on an already established strong and important foundation of Faculty Development in Family Medicine at McGill.
