1. Director's Message

As the director of the McGill Centre for Research on Children and Families (CRCF), I am delighted to write this annual report to give evidence of the activities of CRCF members between May 2021 and April 2022. The CRCF, is home to cutting-edge research on effective programs and policies concerning youth and family services. It offers a unique platform for developing local, national, and international collaboration in academic and non-academic milieus. The Centre also acts as a hub that brings together passionate and committed researchers, and students. Between May 2021 and April 2022, the Centre supported a thriving academic community with 39 faculty members who ran 38 national and international projects and provided training to 6 postdoctoral fellows, 37 graduate and non-graduate students, and 18 associate members. The Centre can also count on 2 outstanding staff members that bring invaluable support to the Centre's activities.

The Centre's activities range from assisting agencies with program development and program evaluation activities, to conducting clinical studies, providing governments with policy advice, and leading provincial and national epidemiological studies. During the 2021-22 fiscal year, our physical space was seldom used due to restrictions put in place to curb the spread of the COVID-19 virus, however, the CRCF continued supporting members remotely, conserving the Centre's collegial spirit and sense of community. CRCF members upheld their commitment to pursuing research that aims to significantly impact the lives of children, youth, and families by expanding knowledge, advancing direct practices, developing policies, building community capacities and partnerships in areas of child welfare and child maltreatment, child and family health and wellbeing, child education, trauma and resilience, poverty, childhood disability and social pediatrics. In addition, the Centre houses a Quebec-wide administrative data base tracking over 400,000 children who have received Youth Protection services over the last twenty years.

Originally established in 1985 through an endowment from the Alva Foundation as the *Centre for Study of Services to Vulnerable Families*¹, the Centre's name and mandate were re-focused in 2005 with the mission to "conduct and disseminate research on effective programs and policies for vulnerable children and youth and their families". This gift from the Alva Foundation has placed our centre at the forefront of child welfare research in Canada, and it continues to provide foundation funding for our centre's core activities, such as research meetings, seminars and staff (see Appendix A). Thanks to this gift, the well-being of children and families has been and will remain our prime research focus, with strong emphasis on research with Indigenous children and their communities in Canada.

In addition, support for community research projects is provided through a Royal Bank of Canada Fellowship endowment fund which provides high-quality training to graduate students. The work conducted using these funds has a direct impact on vulnerable children and their families as it allows the Centre to offer a unique platform to develop collaborations with non-academic milieus to help services providers, policy-makers, and governmental representatives access high-quality and sound evidence on which to base their decisions.

Indeed, what makes the CRCF so unique is the members' deep involvement and unceasing collaboration with practice and policy settings allowing the research to make a true impact for children and families who live in vulnerable contexts. Based on sustained collaborations, Centre researchers have continued working with many service providers with which we have established fruitful partnerships over the years. Please visit our website (<https://www.mcgill.ca/crcf/>) to view a map that geographically locates the partner organizations CRCF members have or are collaborating with. The map is a visual representation of the very large community who participate in the research facilitated by the CRCF. Please note that this list is not comprehensive but highlights many of the partners we have collaborating with.

This report covers research, training and dissemination activities from May 2021 to April 2022, and financial reports covering the 2021-22 fiscal year (May 1, 2021 to April 30, 2022). Thirty-eight research projects were run through the Centre supported by a budget of $1,730,261 in research grants and contracts in 2021-22.

The Centre's dissemination and knowledge mobilization activities include a monthly research seminar series and two monthly journal clubs. The Centre's reach across Canada and internationally is supported by the Canadian Child Welfare Research Portal (cwrp.ca), Canada's most extensive child welfare research and policy clearinghouse. Centre members published 92 articles in peer reviewed journals, 2 books, 4 book chapters and 85 reports and other publications from May 2021 to April 2022.

The Centre also provided research training through a variety of programs including CRCF awards, external graduate scholarships, research assistantships, journal clubs and thesis research support.

Entering my ninth year as the Director of the Centre, I am truly honoured to be representing a group of academics and trainees that are thriving to improve the well-being and strengths of children and families facing adversity and challenges. We hope our work can continue supporting prevention initiatives, early intervention, specialized services and effective policies to shift positively the trajectories of vulnerable populations. This appears to be more important than ever before as we move into the 2022-23 academic year with a continued COVID-19 presence.

2. Mission and Mandate

Mission Statement

The Centre's mission is to conduct and disseminate research on effective programs and policies for vulnerable children and youth and their families.

Vulnerability is broadly defined to include social, family, emotional, cognitive and health related problems that place children and youth at risk of developing serious psycho-social problems and not being able to achieve their full developmental potential. These can include a range of problems such as poverty, family violence, youth violence, mental health problems and disabilities. Programs and policies include prevention and intervention programs to support vulnerable children and their families that have been developed in a range of settings, including but not limited to child welfare, children's mental health, education, recreation, and health care.

Mandate

The Centre Mandate is to:

- i. conduct research on effective prevention and intervention programs for vulnerable children and their families, including (i) research to understand risk and protective factors, (ii) efficacy and cost-effectiveness of prevention and intervention programs, (iii) analysis of administrative datasets to describe services and track outcomes, and (iv) in-depth studies to explore process and contextual factors that effect program implementation;
- ii. develop partnerships between researchers, service providers and policy makers, with a specific focus on (i) promoting research in partnership with the Centres intégrés de santé et de services sociaux and other local health and social service agencies, particularly organizations serving the Anglophone community, and (ii) providing a bridge between Quebec's extensive network of francophone community-university child and family research groups and other McGill, Canadian and international research groups focusing on vulnerable children and youth;
- iii. provide research training for graduate and post-graduate students, as well as supporting the development of research capacity in child and family service agencies;
- iv. ensure timely dissemination of Centre-based research in a manner that is accessible and relevant to policy makers and service providers.

Website

There have been a total of 30,604 views to the CRCF website (<http://www.mcgill.ca/crcf/>) from May 1, 2021 to April 30, 2022. The Centre also supports the Canadian Child Welfare Research Portal (www.cwrp.ca), which serves as a clearinghouse for child welfare research and policy across Canada.

4. Research

The CRCF activities chart tracks all ongoing funds, new funds received in the fiscal year as well as the number of students involved with Centre research activities (see Appendix C for further details). These do not include funds from the Centre’s endowment (see Appendix A) nor do they included funds that Centre researchers have access to as collaborators or co-investigators on projects managed outside of the Centre.

Salient Accomplishments

The 2022 Annual Bilingual Symposium on Child and Youth Trauma took place virtually on May 18th and 19th 2022 and gathered 1,300 participants from Canada, the U.S., Europe, Africa, and Australia. This event, which is organized by the Canadian Consortium on Child and Youth Trauma through a SSHRC Partnership Grant bringing together McGill University and other partner organizations, is an opportunity for practitioners, policy-makers, researchers, and students to connect across sectors to improve the provision of trauma-informed care for children and youth. This year, the keynote speaker was Dr. Sandra Bloom, who presented her new organizational and clinical approach called Creating PRESENCE. The two-day Symposium also highlighted eight practice-based presentations, including several panels given by former youth in care who shared their reflections on how existing child welfare systems can be improved. During the event, two Canadian Consortium on Child & Youth Trauma 2022 Student Awards were given to Kyreny Scott, from the University of Victoria, and Josianne Lamothe, from McGill University, to highlight their contributions to the advancement of research in the field of child and youth trauma. To learn more, please visit the Consortium website: <https://www.traumaconsortium.com/en/>

The CRCF has launched CRCF Illuminates Research, a series of infographic sheets that provide a brief summary of our members' research and how it has impacted the well-being of children and families. The information is relayed with graphics and data visualizations like pie charts and bar graphs, and minimal text that gives an easy-to-understand overview of the topic. The infographic sheets can be found on the CRCF website: <https://www.mcgill.ca/crcf/publications/crcf-illuminates-research>.

In addition, the number of projects undertaken by CRCF members and of graduate members participating in the Centre's activities has remained high. Please refer to Appendix F for a list of notable awards, prizes and fellowships received by CRCF members during the 2021-22 fiscal year.

RBC Children's Services Research & Training Program

We express our profound gratitude to the RBC Foundation for providing invaluable support to the McGill Centre for Research on Children and Families (CRCF). Thanks to the $2 million generous gift of the RBC Children's Services Research & Training Program, allocated from 2009-2019, fruitful research collaborations have been made with community partners generating effective and meaningful practices and policies that directly and positively impact vulnerable populations of children and their families.

Although the RBC gift as come to an end, an endowed portion, the RBC Fellowship fund, continues to provides high-quality training to graduate students to prepare them to undertake productive careers as practitioners, policy- makers, teachers, and researchers. It allows students to collaborate with community professionals to evaluate the effectiveness of programs and services and to work hand in hand with the child-serving sector to promote the use of data within agencies so as to improve service efficiency and outcomes for children and families. Graduate students collaborate closely with organizations and CRCF professors to form a unique and effective alliance to create transformational changes to our communities.

Research highlights

The RBC Fellowship fund supported various research initiatives such as those listed below.

- Canadian Consortium on Child & Youth Trauma; Jennifer Nutton
Ky Scott joined the Canadian Consortium on Child & Youth Trauma (CCCYT) as a Bachelors of Social Work practicum student from the University of Victoria (UVIC) in January 2022 under the supervision of Jennifer Nutton, UVIC Assistant Teaching Professor and member of the CRCF. Ky began her field placement under the strong mentorship of CRCF research assistants and guided by the leadership of Dr Delphine Collin-Vezina. Ky has assisted in searching, cataloguing, reviewing, and triaging monthly journal articles related to child and youth trauma with a particular focus on seeking voices and perspectives from BIPOC scholars. Following the direction of the triage committee, Ky has worked alongside other students to present selected articles to the broader consortium membership, including facilitating discussions on key findings and preparing monthly bulletins with new information garnered through the process. This is of critical importance to ensure scholars and students alike are privy and informed on the most current data and findings related to child and youth trauma, but also emphasizes the importance of diversity in academic research. Ky's passion for this has provided a gateway for ongoing learning and skill development, as she participated and presented in the annual Symposium 2022, and continues to make strong working connections and relationships across Canada as a result of the grant funding made available by RBC. Ky is incredibly grateful for the investment in her professional academic career and intends to continue focusing her efforts on amplifying the voices of equity-deserving groups in research.
- Intimate partner violence prevention services: The forgotten intervention to reduce risk of intimate partner violence during the COVID-19 shut-down Part II: Service Users: Katherine Maurer
In the wake of the COVID-19 outbreak, media outlets as well as public health organizations, e.g., World Health Organization (WHO, 2020), raised the alarm about the potential for a spike in intimate partner violence (IPV) as a result of couples and families sheltering in place during the pandemic. Concerns were largely focused on the experiences of cisgender heterosexual women and children as victims of IPV (Bradbury-Jones & Isham, 2020; Chandan et al., 2020; van Gelder et al., 2020), and on secondary and tertiary interventions to identify and respond to IPV after it has occurred (Bradbury-Jones, 2020; Chandan et al., 2020; Jones & Isham, 2020; van Gelder et al., 2020; van Gelder et al., 2020; Usher et al., 2020; Yahya et al., 2020). Our study focused on an essential tertiary intervention, services for IPV perpetrators, as a crucial prevention to mitigate the recurrence of IPV during the COVID-19 pandemic. We faced many difficulties recruiting participants and ultimately only were able to interview 6 men, aged 34-59 years old, of varying levels of income and education. Four participants were of North American origins. Two participants reported that they were living apart from their partner, 2 with their partner, and 2 participants were not currently in a relationship. Five out of 6 participants perceived the COVID-19 pandemic to have had a negative impact on their romantic relationship, specifically in increased physical and verbal abuse. All participants reported that the IPV services had a positive impact on their ability to deal with conflict in their romantic relationship. Four participants reported that they were likely to turn to an organization or private practitioner for support in the future if they experience relationship problems. Given the challenges of recruitment during the peak periods of the pandemic, we are exploring options for launching the survey again, now that the pandemic social isolation and shelter-at-home measures are no longer in place. Acknowledgments to research assistants Yanina Chukhovich, Maybel Gelly, Mert Kimyaci and Katy Konyk.

- Shift: Working for Change in Participatory Research: Zack Marshall
With the RBC Fellowship we were fortunate to be able to provide a student stipend to MSW Thesis student Noé Préfontaine. Noé has been engaged with Shift: Working for Change in Participatory Research, including our recent project focused on understanding the impact of COVID-19 on the work experiences of peer researchers living with HIV. We completed seven focus groups in Summer 2022 and Noé is now working with the larger team to support transcription, data analysis, and knowledge mobilization.

5. Centre Activities

Research Seminars

CRCF research seminars provide an opportunity for faculty, visiting scholars and graduate students to share and discuss their research. As in the previous year, the 2021-2022 seminars were offered virtually and ran from January to April 2022. Two seminars were offered, giving members the opportunity to learn from McGill's Associate Provost, Equity & Academic Policies and the University of Regina's Director of Social Policy Research Centre. (see Appendix E for further details).

For more information and presentation slides, visit <http://www.mcgill.ca/crcf/events/seminar>.

Training

The Centre provided research training to approximately 37 students through a variety of programs including awards, external graduate scholarships (FQRSC & SSHRC), research assistantships, journal clubs (see Appendix G for further details) and thesis research support.

The awards offered by the Centre include the CRCF Graduate Student Travel Grant and the CRCF Child Protection Scholarship. As a result of the travel restrictions put in place during the pandemic, the focus of the CRCF Travel Grant was temporarily changed to include student training. During the 2021-22 fiscal period, the Travel Grant was awarded to eight students.

The CRCF Child Protection Scholarship was created in honor of Mr. Manuel Batshaw who bequeathed a generous donation to the Centre in 2017. He was a Canadian social worker best known for leading a provincially mandated committee in the 1970s that studied the situation of youth in care and recommended many of the principles and practices that form the basis of Quebec Youth Protection practice. His contribution was commemorated in the name of the Batshaw Youth and Family Centres (now part of the CIUSSS Ouest-de-l'Île-de-Montréal).

For information on other training opportunities provided by the CRCF, please visit <http://www.mcgill.ca/crcf/events>.

6. Centre Development

Marjorie Rabiau (Faculty Representative)
Katherine Maurer (Faculty Representative)
Ashley Lowenthal (Graduate Student Representative)
Sydney Duder (Honorary)
Michael Udy (Honorary)

7. Financial Report

The Centre manages funds from four sources: (1) the CRCF Endowed Income Fund which is used to cover Centre operating costs, (2) the CRCF Endowed Social Work Fellowship Fund which is used for student travel grants, (3) research project funds and (4) the RBC Fellowship fund. Annual financial reports for the CRCF Endowed Income Fund and a summary of research funds are included in the appendices and are reported on a fiscal year basis. No funds were disbursed from the CRCF Endowed Social Work Fellowship Fund during the reporting period therefore a financial report is not provided. Financial reports specific to externally funded research projects and the RBC fund are filed separately.

CRCF Operating Fund

The CRCF Operating Fund (see Appendix A) supports the Centre's administration and its research and dissemination infrastructure.

CRCF Student Travel Grants

The Social Work Fellowship Fund (CRCF Travel Grant) (see Appendix H) produced an income of $ 3,966 in 2021-22. Eight students received travel grants for a total expenditure of $2,808.

Funds

Appendix C summarizes research funds run through the Centre. $1,730,261 in research grants and contracts were run through the Centre in 2021-22. We are projecting a similar level of grant and contract funding over the next year, a level of research activity that is in keeping with the available research space and infrastructure and that is consistent with a sustained focus on training and dissemination activities.
