

Operations Management Research Transportation and Logistics

In this global economy, the innovations in logistics and transportation have become one of main driving forces that flattened the world. The demand for transportation of goods has grown dramatically with the rise of globalization, and companies need to design and operate more robust and scalable logistics network to deal with this increase in demand. There are many challenging operational problems associated with logistics, and these problems are only growing in importance and difficulty as the world economy grows.