

The Department of English presents

Black Living + Other Computational Poetics

The 2022-23 Spector Lecture

Marisa Parham

University of Maryland

March 8, 4 - 6 PM

Leacock Building

McGill University

Room 232

Marisa Parham is Visiting Professor of English at the University of Maryland, where she serves as director for the African American Digital Humanities initiative (AADHUM), and is the associate director for the Maryland Institute for Technology in the Humanities (MITH). She also co-directs the Immersive Realities Lab for the Humanities, which is an independent workgroup for digital and experimental humanities (irLhumanities). Parham's current teaching and research projects focus on texts and technologies that problematize assumptions about time, space, and bodily materiality. She is particularly interested in how such terms share a history of increasing complexity in literary and cultural texts produced by African Americans, and how they also offer ways of thinking about intersectional approaches to digital humanities and technology studies.

The lecture will be live-streamed and live-captioned.

Register to the online event!

McGill

Department of English | Département d'anglais

