

Mentorship in Academic Medicine: What's all the Hype?

February 13th, 2020 15:00-16:00

Michelle Elizov

MD, FRCPC, MHPE

Dr. Michelle Elizov is a General Internist based at the Jewish General Hospital. She obtained her MD and completed her IM and GIM residencies at McGill, and completed a Master's in Health Professions Education with Honours from the University of Maastricht in the Netherlands. She has held various educational leadership positions including JGH site director for the IM training program, as well as Director of Education for the CIUSSS Centre-Ouest. She is currently Chair of the McGill GIM Competence Committee and Vice-Chair of the Royal College GIM Specialty Committee. She is an Associate Member of the McGill Institute for Health Sciences Education and is the Assistant Dean Faculty Development for the Faculty of Medicine. She is passionate about education and teaching and the role of mentorship in the development of health professionals learners and colleagues, and will present on various aspects of mentorship (including how it can overlap with other roles, what are the benefits and to whom, what are the various types of support mentoring can offer) as well as describe some of the mentorship opportunities that currently exist within the Faculty.

The seminar will take place at the Department of Family Medicine at 5858, Côte-des-Neiges Rd, 3rd floor, classrooms 4 & 5

*There is no parking on site and parking is limited in the area. Taxis and public transport are advised.

Cannot be present in person but would like to attend? Join via webinar here

For questions regarding this event, please contact research.fammed@mcgill.ca

