

Speaker Biographies

Dr. Deneen Vojta brings experience as an entrepreneur, and strategic leader in the healthcare industry. She has a successful track record of accelerating the design, execution and scaling of disruptive programs, products and services and has built multiple businesses with successful exits. Dr. Vojta joined UnitedHealth Group in 2006 after the company acquired MYnetico, a digital disease management company that she founded and served as CEO. Dr. Vojta began her career at The Children's Hospital of Philadelphia (CHOP) where she was a resident in Pediatrics and a fellow in Hematology & Oncology. Subsequently, she launched a CHOP's pediatric hospitalist program. Currently, Dr. Vojta serves on the governance board of Childrens' Minnesota and the advisory board of The Center for Health Incentives & Behavioral Economics at Penn Medicine. In 2014, she was an Emmy® Award winner and in 2013, a CES® Innovation Design and Engineering Innovation Honoree. Dr. Vojta holds a M.D. from Temple University School of Medicine, and a B.S. in Behavioral Neuroscience from University of Pittsburgh.

Al is Professor of Medicine and a Managing Director at the Dartmouth Institute where his work is dedicated to forging partnerships with the capabilities essential to achieve sustainable health care economies. Before Dartmouth, he served as Chief of General Medicine at Harvard and Massachusetts General Hospital for three decades. Clinical training and research interests have spanned from intensive care to integration of primary care and population health, always focused on improving the quality of decisions made from the frontlines to the highest levels of health and care system leadership. Al is founding editor of the text, Primary Care Medicine, in its eighth edition. He is a member of the National Academy of Medicine, Inaugural International Visiting Fellow at the King's Fund, a Visiting Professor of UCL, and a founding faculty member of the Cambridge Judge Primary Care Innovation Academy at Cambridge University. He received an A.B. from Dartmouth, an M.D. from Harvard Medical School, and an M.P.P. from Harvard's Kennedy School of Government.

Margaret works with faculty colleagues at the Dartmouth Institute for Health Policy and Clinical Practice to move research into practice through learning programs focused on sustainable health and care. She served as Lecturer at the Tuck School of Business at Dartmouth before joining the Institute as Honorary Lecturer and is a founding faculty member of the Cambridge Judge Primary Care Innovation Academy. Before joining Dartmouth, Margaret was a Senior Audit Partner for more than 30 years at Deloitte where she led Emerging Growth Client Services for the Americas, served as Managing Partner for Strategy, Innovation, Communication and Marketing for the Audit and Enterprise Risk Consulting group, and as an elected Member of the Board of Directors. From 2009, Margaret served as Deloitte's Chief Learning Officer, leading organizational transformation through the launch of Deloitte University and developing the technical, professional and leadership learning for more than 14,000 auditors and risk consultants. Margaret holds an A.B. from Wellesley College and an M.S. from the Sloan School at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology.