

MCGILL FAMILY MEDICINE RESEARCH SEMINARS

“UPDATE AND MEASUREMENT PROPERTIES OF THE MIXED METHOD APPRAISAL TOOL (MMAT): A MIXED METHODS STUDY.”

Quan Nha Hong

Quan Nha Hong is a PhD candidate at the Department of Family Medicine at McGill. She holds a doctoral fellowship from CIHR. She is an occupational therapist with masters in clinical sciences and health technology assessment. She is interested in mixed studies reviews, methods of knowledge synthesis and critical appraisal. Her doctoral research project is on the validation of the Mixed Methods Appraisal Tool (MMAT).

Thursday February 16, 2017
From 12:30-2:00 p.m.
Department of Family Medicine
5858 ch. de la Côte-des-Neiges, 3rd floor, suite 300

BRING YOUR LUNCH! There will be light refreshments.
There is no parking on site and parking is limited in the area.
Taxis and public transport are advised.

Cannot make the seminar physically, but would like to attend?
Please register for the webinar here.
(Note: Students from FMED 504 are expected to attend)

McGill

Department of Family Medicine

Département de médecine de famille