What Is Global Health?

- Global Health and International Health and Medicine are rooted in community-oriented preventive medicine and primary care.
- Global Health addresses the cultural, economic, political, and environmental factors that affect the health of individuals and populations in order to optimize health care resources in diverse communities across the globe.
But…… “Global Health”?

- General term, without well-defined parameters.
- Evolving field with changing dimensions and challenges.
- No specific standards for global health training and credentialing.
- No established curriculum for medical educators.
GHEC

- Epiphany-1990-Washington DC
- Consultation-Organizational meeting Arizona, March, 1991
- 24 Universities launch IHMEC
- 49 experts contributed 53 articles (in 1991 & 1995) to define the new reality of GH
- Focus on International Health Programs, in Academic Centers – education relating to problems of development, marginalization, equity, research, and service
But.....GHEC had issues

- lack of recognized “products” in GH education
- +/- voice of target audience (i.e., students) in management
- a North American organization
- poor financial base
- mainly a consortium of medical schools
- Mission/activities not fully defined
Welcome to the Global Health Education community! This virtual space serves the community of students, instructors, authors and practitioners interested in global health. Here you will find:

Global Health education resources
A wide variety of resources, developed by experts in global health, are available to support self-paced learning and instruction in the field.

Global Health Education Wiki
An online authoring space to promote the collaboration and linkage of the collective intelligence of the community, and
