

Postdoctoral Fellow in Health and Law

The McGill Research Group on Health and Law (RGHL) at McGill University's Faculty of Law is seeking a post-doctoral fellow for a one-year period beginning in 2017 (start date flexible).

About the Research Group on Health and Law (www.mcgill.ca/healthlaw)

The RGHL is a research network that seeks to foster the sharing of scholarship and ideas among professors and students, and encourages collaborative work on health-related issues. It also seeks to build interdisciplinary bridges across the University with colleagues working on health-related topics. Finally, it aims to provide students with a breadth of opportunities for pursuing intellectual endeavours in the field of health law through course work, independent research, graduate studies, or extra-curricular engagements.

Responsibilities

The primary responsibility will be the preparation of grant applications to fund future and ongoing RGHL activities. Other tasks may include assisting in carrying out current projects and curriculum development in public health law and policy. The work will be carried out under the supervision of the RGHL conveners and members.

The Postdoctoral Fellow is expected to conduct his or her own research alongside his or her responsibilities in assisting the RGHL. Salary: $30,000 per annum.

Qualities sought

- Completion of doctoral-level studies in law with a focus on law and health, or law degree followed by doctoral studies in health law, policy, or a related discipline.
- Fluency in English
- Proficiency in French
- Interdisciplinary background an asset
- Interest in criminal law an asset
- Experience writing grant applications an asset

Application deadline: 13 January 2017

Please submit curriculum vitae, official transcripts and two letters of recommendation by email to rghl.law@mcgill.ca.

Questions may be addressed to rghl.law@mcgill.ca