The encounter between Islam and Zoroastrianism had a deep impact on both religious traditions, as well as on other traditions of Late Antiquity. As a result of this encounter, both traditions were deeply reconfigured with regard to the necessities of the new empire and the new era. The lecture illustrates how the encounter impacted both Zoroastrian and Islamic law, particularly concerning the status of women.