Collection Summary

Title: Julius Schloss Collection

Span Dates: 1920–1973

Creator: Schloss, Julius, 1902–1973

Language: Collection material in Dutch, English, French, German, Italian, Japanese, and Mandarin.

Repository: Marvin Duchow Music Library, Schulich School of Music, McGill University, Montréal, Québec, Canada

Abstract: The Julius Schloss Collection consists of compositions, sketches, studies and analyses by the German-Jewish composer Julius Schloss, as well as correspondence, clippings, programs, reviews, photographs, and library of books and scores. Of particular interest are valuable artefacts of Bergiana, including a handwritten Baudelaire poem in Alban Berg's hand that served as the "secret poem" to the Lyric Suite, and documents pertaining to Schloss's experiences in exile in Shanghai and the United States.

Administrative Information

Provenance

Purchased 1972 by McGill University in an arrangement with Karl Steiner, a long-time friend of Julius Schloss. An additional collection of correspondence involving Alban Berg, Julius Schloss, and others was donated by Schloss to Hans Moldenhauer in the 1960s; it currently resides in Moldenhauer Archive of the Bayerische Staatsbibliothek in Munich. A final component of the Schloss Nachlass was sold Karl Steiner to the Musikverein in Vienna.

Accruals

No further accruals are expected.

Scope and Content Note

The Julius Schloss Collection consists of Julius Schloss's complete portfolio of published and unpublished compositions, sketches, studies and analyses. In addition, it contains documentary artefacts, including correspondence, newspaper, magazine and journal clippings, concert and competition programs, media reviews, and photographs, that chronicle both the early life of this German-Jewish composer in Europe and his later days in exile in Shanghai and the United States.

Schloss was born in Saarlouis, Germany on 3 May 1902 and studied composition at the Hoch Conservatory in Frankfurt. He continued his education in Vienna under Alban Berg, for whom the young pupil emerged as a competent and trustworthy assistant, editor and friend. Schloss oversaw the editorial work on Berg's opera Wozzeck and his Lyric Suite for string quartet. During this time, Schloss composed several significant works, including his first string quartet, a sonata for piano, and a requiem for chorus and percussion, for which he won the Emil-Hertzka Gedächtnis prize in 1933. By the late 1930s, Schloss's Jewish heritage put him at great risk under the Hitler regime. After being briefly interned at the Dachau concentration camp in 1938, Schloss immigrated to Shanghai. In 1948, he left China for the United States, settling in Belleville, New Jersey and attaining citizenship in 1954. In spite of his European success, Schloss was unable to secure a teaching position or editorial work in his new homeland. While his works continued to be performed with support from long-time friend Karl Steiner, Schloss continued to compose until his death on 26 October 1973 at age 71.

The content of the collection pertains to several lines of historical research: First, Schloss's close relationship with Alban Berg as a personal assistant and chief copy editor, as well as his interaction with other contemporaries in Vienna during the 1920s, may offer new insight in studies of the Second Viennese School. The items of Bergiana, including a handwritten Baudelaire poem by Berg which served as a "secret program" to the Lyric Suite and a selection of correspondence surrounding Berg's last wishes for the Lyric Suite score, are particularly valuable. Second, Schloss's ten-year exile in Shanghai, documented in assorted correspondence, programs, reviews and miscellaneous artefacts, may provide a new account of the Shanghai generation. Finally, the continuation of Schloss's life in the United States as a struggling composer and teacher bears witness to the difficult conditions for the American émigré population after World War II.

Organisation of the Julius Schloss Collection

The Julius Schloss Collection is organised into seven series:

- Correspondence
- Compositions
- Studies & Analyses
- Concerts & Competitions
- Clippings
- Miscellaneous
- Photographs

Each series is organized into boxes labelled by the series number and box number (e.g. S2.3 for the third box in series 2). Each box is in turn organized by folders with folder (F) numbers. Each item or group of items is assigned a Schloss Collection (SC) number. The F and SC numbers are in no particular order.

In the finding aid that follows, the first column lists series-box numbers, the second column lists SC numbers, and the third column lists the number of items in that listing.

An index of the books and scores found in the Schloss library exists as a supplement to the find aid. A second supplement contains a bibliography of sources in current scholarship that pertain to Julius Schloss and his music.

All dates are notated in the form DD.MM.YYYY.
