Annul Report
2019-2020
MCLL is for people who want to continue learning for the joy of it, in an informal setting, and who wish to share their knowledge, ideas, experience and interests with others. Based on a peer-learning concept, our small study groups are led by our volunteer moderators.
Message from The Dean

Dear Members of the McGill Community for Lifelong Learning,

This past year, MCLL celebrated its 30th birthday. You don’t look a day over 29! I congratulate MCLL on this incredible journey of learning to date. We have built on the strong foundation Fiona Clark created to strengthen the partnership between the School of Continuing Studies and MCLL. But action speaks louder than words – whether through MCLL’s outreach to senior communities across Montreal or your significant mentorship of learners of all ages at McGill University. With your much appreciated support, we have been able to give students a chance to study at McGill and to ensure that lifelong learning is supported at McGill University.

Thank you and congratulations on another successful year!

Carola Weil, PHD
Mission Statement

Peer learning and active participation are two cornerstones of MCLL’s curriculum; these principles differentiate its programs from traditional university courses and classes. The form of participation varies according to the subject matter and the approach chosen by the moderator. The level of involvement can range from mere presence, to advance preparation/research, participation in group discussions and presentations to the class. Members assume collective responsibility for sharing their knowledge and experience with others. The result is a rich and dynamic learning environment.

MCLL History

The McGill Institute for Learning in Retirement (MILR) was founded in 1989. The name was changed in 2011 to the McGill Community for Lifelong Learning (MCLL) but the basic goals and objectives have remained the same. Led by volunteers and managed by a council elected from among its members, MCLL is a unique, dynamic, self-financing organization within the McGill School of Continuing Studies.
There are so many events and initiatives to highlight in 2019-2020 academic year: the 30th anniversary celebration, the establishment of the Fiona Clark Bursary, the restructuring of MCLL paid staff position and the signing of the new Memorandum of Understanding between SCS and MCLL, not to mention various initiatives promoting community engagement and collaboration, as well as intergenerational projects... What stands out for me the most is the flourishing of a close and supportive relationship between SCS and MCLL. We worked together and we accomplished so much, whether it was through workshops conducted with SCS Career Advising and Transition Services (CATS), intergenerational projects with Language & Intercultural Communications Program, or launching of our new website and electronic newsletter with the SCS Marketing Team. We have also gained more autonomy and access to financial training and reporting. It has been a real pleasure to witness and be a part of these creative, collaborative and productive efforts.

Ana Milic
MCLL Executive Officer

One of the most satisfying things about being part of MCLL is the feeling of responding to a vital need. This sentiment was especially strong when we were first faced with confinement last spring. We had precious little experience in remote learning technologies but one member after another volunteered and we pulled it off. (See MCLL meets COVID-19, p. 10).

The lockdown was an extreme example of how members of MCLL have been making a small miracle happen, semester after semester, for over thirty years now. (See MCLL Celebrates its Thirtieth Birthday, p. 9). It is astonishing to see just how many people volunteer to make MCLL possible. The last three pages of this report provide a list of names, over 250 in total, who have volunteered in one capacity or another in 2019-2020. And there are certainly others whose contribution remains anonymous, small or large, in money or in kind.

Learning and caring, that is MCLL. It is because MCLL responds to these needs so whole-heartedly that the generous gifts of energy, creativity and yes, money, are forthcoming. Thanks to all.

Making the Miracle Happen

Four times a year, our curriculum committee solicits proposals from members who wish to moderate a study groups, run a workshop or give a lecture.

The proposals are then worked up and fit into a schedule which is published as our calendar for each semester.

A survey is conducted at the end of each semester which helps moderators adapt their future proposals.

Every semester our volunteer moderators come up with between 30 and 50 new proposals for study groups and lectures.

- 105 Study Groups
- 85 Lectures

MCLL Has a New Executive Officer

In the wake of an organizational reform at the School of the Continuing Studies, MCLL has chosen Ana Milic to become the new Executive Officer of MCLL. Ana is not new to our organization – she had been administrative coordinator for the past ten years – but there is little doubt that she will bring her own brand of energy to the dynamics of cooperation with SCS. Ana comes to this position not only with her tried and proven organizational skills but a powerful commitment to community outreach and social justice.
MCLL Celebrates its 30th Anniversary

In the fall of 1989, The McGill Institute for Learning in Retirement was founded as an organization emphasizing peer learning, the first of its kind in Canada. The academic emphasis together with the concept of member ownership and participation were the core elements of the vision which inspired the founding members under the leadership of Fiona Clark, at that time assistant director of the McGill Center for Continuing Education.

Thirty years later, the organization rebaptized as the McGill Community for Lifelong Learning, celebrated the continuing relevance of this vision by raising enough money to permanently endow a $1,000 annual bursary for a mature student at the School of Continuing Studies. See the list of donors on the back page of this report.

Fiona Clark Bursary

In order to honour the vision of Fiona Clark, principal founder of the McGill Community of Lifelong Learning, a bursary was created to provide support and encouragement to a mature learner who decides to pursue studies at the School of Continuing Studies.

The First Bursary Recipient

MCLL is proud to announce that the first annual Fiona Clark Bursary has been attributed to Fatimeh who recently arrived in Montreal from Iran. A mother of two, she is a full time student enrolled in the English language program and intends to continue studying with a view to obtain a diploma in public relations. We wish her success and satisfaction in her chosen field of endeavour.

Two key figures in making the 30th anniversary a success

Sandra Frisby (left) was the main organizer of the silent auction, while Juliet Wait headed up the committee responsible for organizing the Gala Luncheon Event.
MCLL Meets Covid-19

Excerpt from the President’s Report given at the annual general meeting held on June 12, 2020. Over 100 members were in attendance through Zoom!

Our link with McGill and the School of Continuing Studies has been crucial in helping us weather the very difficult period brought on by the pandemic. The dean, Carola Weil, has set the example in providing material and moral support to MCLL and all the units of the School have been steadfast in their support. But no amount of support from SCS would have saved us if the heart and soul of MCLL were not strong and healthy. MCLL has proved just how deep and broad is our commitment to learning for the joy of it. Learning and joy: these two goals have allowed us to continue and even thrive during this difficult period.

The closing of the office and the general lockdown might have been a knockout blow to us if it weren’t for some valiant pioneers who have been preparing us for technological changes for years several years now. But what was amazing to see was the way our members stepped up, in one wave after another, to make sure that we would continue our activities. “We have to continue”, they cried, “We can do it.”

Martin Coles headed up the IT committee which played a crucial role in getting MCLL on its feet when the downtown offices closed. Other members include Tim Skene, Rick Jones and a very faithful collaborator from Toronto, Frank Richardson.
MCLL Meets Covid-19

Wave after wave

- People who believed in Zoom: Martin Coles, Tim Skene and Rick Jones as well as Frank Nicholson from Toronto all immediately volunteered to train members in using Zoom.
- And then the moderators. Ten moderators volunteered to give a study group in an environment which was entirely new to them.
- And then our members: 150 different members who had never participated in anything like this before signed up to try it out. Not to talk about technology, not particularly to talk about the pandemic but to talk about ideas and to be with people that they cared about.
- And at the same time, our office volunteers, were there non-stop to respond to emails, to set up a phone chain to call up ALL our members, to see how they were doing, to keep in touch, to help with technological issues.
- And at the same time our curriculum committee: To Nina Maksymiw and to all the curriculum committee: we have seen the struggle you have waged.
- And a core group of close collaborators with whom Ana and I have worked tirelessly. Sandra Baines, our incoming president, Alice Sidorow our treasurer, and Susan Biggs, our volunteer coordinator.
- Council too, was always there, offering constructive suggestions, providing moral support.

Results

MCLL was able to organize two 5-week sessions in April and May, offering a total of 21 study groups. 150 people registered for the first session and 209 for the second.

And Now

The struggle to survive is by no means over. As long as the pandemic continues, extraordinary measure of support and solidarity will be necessary. Now, as much as in March, we need people to step up and contribute. Visit our website for up-to-date information: https://www.mcgill.ca/mcll.

Judith Elson and many other members showed how MCLL is more than just a place to learn. It is also a place where people reach out to each other. Over 80 volunteers called up their fellow members to see how they were doing during the pandemic.
MCLL Reaches Out

Potter Report Notes Desire for Closer Integration with McGill Community

Former dean of Continuing Studies, Dr. Judith Potter conducted a study of MCLL in part to understand what MCLL members perceive that they need from McGill University and how they believe they can contribute to McGill. “One outcome that was somewhat surprising”, she wrote, “was the intensity of the desire [by MCLL members] to be more closely integrated with the University community. Members believe that there is a deep and wide pool of experience and expertise resident within MCLL that could be more effectively recognized and utilized by the University.” To consult the full report: https://www.mcgill.ca/mcll/members.

Conversation Exchange Program

MCLL worked with Projet Changement, a community-based centre for seniors on the Plateau, to set up a Conversation Exchange program. The objective is to provide a forum where members from each organization can either improve their skills in their second language or help someone else to do so ... or both. Two meetings were held, each involving about 20 people but unfortunately, the program had to be suspended in March due to the outbreak of Covid-19.
MCLL Reaches Out

The Brainy Bar exists to allow international students at the School of Continuing Studies a chance to practice their conversational skills in English while at the same time helping our members to become more familiar with new technologies of information and communication. Whether it be mastering the iPad or learning how to make the most of your Smart phone, this program is a magnificent experiment in intergenerational learning.

Flourishing Skills and Talents

MCLL is dedicated to providing an environment where the skills and talents of its members can flourish. Here we see Robert Winters at the vernissage of his photo exhibition held in the MCLL Lounge. In addition to providing a venue for our members who are artists, several other equally stimulating initiatives are available to our members.

Treasurer’s Report

MCLL is run mainly by volunteers although it has two part-time employees. It finances its operations by way of membership fees and also charges a flat fee per lecture attended. The numbers above reflect the operations prior to Covid-19, when MCLL had a small excess of operational revenues over its operational expenses ($12,722). With the onset of Covid-19, MCLL will no longer be able to survive solely from membership and lecture fees. The spring and summer sessions of 2020-21 indicate that expected revenues for MCLL for 2020-21 will be 40 to 50% of 2019-20 revenues. Whereas expenses for 2020-21 will remain at approximately 70% of 2019-20, MCLL is therefore looking at incurring a loss of approximately $20,000 to $40,000 in 2020-21.

One of the main reasons for such a significant drop in revenues is that Study Groups and Lectures will now be given via Zoom and many members do not feel comfortable enough using this type of medium to participate and therefore prefer not to renew their memberships. That is why in order to survive this harsh period, and until the situation normalizes itself and members can return to classrooms, MCLL will be very much dependent on donations.

Carol Wares: Volunteer of the year in recognition of the exception contribution she has given to MCLL since joining the Office Volunteer group a little over 4 years ago. “A real dynamo” said Susan Biggs who announced the award at the AGM last spring. Carol worked hard on the archives and was in charge of logistics for Friday lectures when they were given on our premises last year.
