

Managing COVID-19: Educational Resources

In the light of COVID-19 outbreak educational institutions have been closed in many parts of the world, leaving many students learning online at home. McGill International Institute of Education has curated a selection of resources from McGill University's Faculty of Education, as well as other organisations in Canada, that can help school-age children, teachers, and parents to deal with this situation.

At-home learning for school-age children:

- Open school
(Learning resources by grades and subject provided by the Quebec government).
- Educational Websites and Resources
(By English School Board of Montreal: Full curriculum weekly activity plan for each grade).
- Elk Island Public Schools
(Fun, bite-sized activities for students by grades by subject).
- Fort McMurray Public Schools
(Essential information on communicating with children on COVID-19, help for structuring your child's day, enrichment resources by grades, mental and physical wellness, and support for students with disabilities).
