

Arboretum ^{Morgan}

Winter Walk with BPQ Follow-Up

What perfect conditions were enjoyed on Saturday morning for the BPQ winter bird walk! A group of around 20 joined biologist Richard Gregson to explore the Arboretum and see what birds they could find. Chickadees called their famous “spring” songs as the sun rose through the trees. Birders of all levels were delighted to encounter cedar waxwings, common redpolls, cardinals, nuthatches, woodpeckers and many more.

We look forward to a Spring Migration Walk with naturalist Betsy McFarlane. This event takes place on May 11, 2019, which is World Migratory Bird Day.

Novice and advanced birders are invited to join and spot the migrants encountered among the wealth of species on their way to their northern breeding grounds.

Find out more

An early morning start!

The chickadees songs were easy to hear in the peaceful forest.

The sun was rising as the group walked through the forest.

A white-breasted nuthatch at a feeder in Blossom Corner.

Communications assistant Hannah Legault joined the tour to get some photos of the outing!

March Break at the Arbo

Two workshops for families are offered during next week's March Break. Bring children to share a unique experience with wildlife as you encounter fascinating inhabitants of our forests with Naturalist Sarah Dixon.

Tuesday, March 5:

Bird Feeding

for children over 3 years old

A chickadee feeds from a child's hand. Photo: Frans Lecluse

Saturday, March 9:
Winter Wildlife Walk
for children over 7 years old

A barred owl leaves its perch. Photo: Gilles Tremblay

Find details on our Website and Facebook
Call to reserve

Info : 514-398-7811

www.morganarboretum.org