The Canadian Journal of Public Health is dedicated to fostering excellence in public health research, scholarship, policy and practice. The aim of the Journal is to advance public health research and practice in Canada and around the world, thus contributing to the improvement of the health of populations and the reduction of health inequalities.

CJPH aims to cultivate critical, theoretically engaged qualitative research about issues of concern to public health scholars and practitioners. We invite you to contribute to a shift in the landscape of qualitative public health research in Canada by submitting your work to CJPH.

Publish your qualitative research with the Canadian Journal of Public Health

A Publication of the Canadian Public Health Association

Editor-in-Chief: Louise Potvin

- ▶ Are you doing research on public health issues that takes qualitative methodology seriously?
- ▶ Is your research theoretically engaged?
- ▶ Are you moving beyond a “bare bones” listing of themes that “emerged” from your research in favour of reflexively interpreting and analyzing your data?

If so, and you are looking for a home for your publication, please consider submitting your work to the Canadian Journal of Public Health (CJPH).

CJPH is committed to publishing qualitative public health research from a range of disciplinary and interdisciplinary locations that is critical and theoretically engaged.

- ▶ The maximum word count (not including abstract and references) for qualitative submissions is 5000.
- ▶ Our review criteria address the interpretive approach to research that is a hallmark of qualitative inquiry.
- ▶ The vision for qualitative research at CJPH and exemplar articles can be found in a special section on qualitative research (Volume 109, Issue 5-6, December 2018).
- ▶ Author instructions for qualitative research submissions can be found here: <https://www.springer.com/journal/41997/submission-guidelines>
