Prosodic phrasing is influenced by phrase lengths/balance as well as syntactic alignment (Selkirk, 2000 in Horne (ed.)); significant differences in preferred prosodic phrasing patterns associated with ENC / DISC / G&T syntactic phrase lengths. But then it is ousted by the real matrix VP3 which follows. It cannot (legitimately) do so when VP2 is a separate prosodic unit. Why is VP2 often suppressed by the parser? Other side of the coin: Where phrase lengths cooperate with syntactic alignment, there’s no mismatch, and no problem with comprehension. What is special about 2CE?
