From the Graduate Office: Oral Defense Invitation
Faculty and students are invited to attend Ram Sapkota’s oral defense “Social and psychological correlates of mass psychogenic illness in Nepal” on Tuesday, March 20 from 16:15-18:00 at the Luder Building in conference room 138.

From the Residency Program Office: Weekly Information Capsule
Did You Know that residents on the research track are entitled to protected time in order to continue working on their research activities? In R1, this is one half day every two weeks from periods 7-13, and in R2-5, they get one half day per week or one full day every two weeks. For R2-5 residents, this also means they should have a 10% reduction in their clinical workload, which could mean 10% fewer assessments or follow-ups over the entire rotation, or protected time with no consultations or other activities. Rotation supervisors should be careful not to exceed research track residents to complete the same workload in 90% of the time allotted to non-research track residents.
