Set to a backdrop of heightened and visible political engagement, contemporary social experiences across the world are marked by the stirrings of protest, uprisings, and activism. Rebellion has become a constant and powerful source of socio-political action, to rectify imbalances as well as to resist the established order, authority, or convention. This intensive course will explore how religious traditions, communities, and discourses around the globe are implicated in rebellion, revolution, and revitalization —both internally and in opposition to external state or social forces— to consider the ongoing significance of World Religions in the evolving social and political dynamics of modern life.

MTWR 13:05 - 15:25, JUNE 7 - JULY 8 2021

Instructors: Lucie Robathan and Anna Lee White lucie.robathan@mail.mcgill.ca
annalee.white@mail.mcgill.ca