Rationale	This course will be added as a Complementary Course to the African Field Study Semester (AFSS) program. The new course offers content on public health and environments in Africa, an area that has not previously been included in the CFSIA program. Development of this course is consistent with the Department's strategic research expertise in health geography, as well as the University's Strategic Research Plan (Health and Society; Environment): http://www.mcgill.ca/files/strategic/McGill_University_SRP_Feb13_2006.pdf .
Responsible Instructor	L. Berrang Ford
Course Description	Exploration of key diseases of development, as well as patterns and determinants of health and disease in East Africa. Topics will focus on population and environmental health.
