SECTION B: APPROVED COURSES

New

Desautels Faculty of Management

MGCR 294 The Firm in the Macroeconomy (3 cr.) [PRN 24310]. Chair's comments/corrections: The course proposal form from the Desautels Faculty of Management and the feedback and consultation from the Department of Economics in the Faculty of Arts have been reviewed. While it is true that it is often the norm that a unit/Department offers courses within its own discipline, there are many situations across the University where different units and/or Faculties have some overlap in content and expertise. Any unit or Department does not have absolute 'ownership' or authority over a topic or discipline. There are reasonable explanations for why this is the case: disciplinary expertise is not always lined up along Departmental lines, academic staff often teach and do research in areas that may fit within more than one unit/Department or even Faculty, and more generally, scholarship is becoming more interdisciplinary and many areas of research and teaching are crossing what has been traditionally aligned within one Department. This is in part because the problems of today are themselves multi-faceted, and our students are often seeking disciplinary breadth in their courses and programs as well as disciplinary depth. What is important is that appropriate governance processes are followed, quality is assured, and our courses are taught by instructors who have the relevant expertise and are aligned with the relevant program(s). What is important is that a consultation process happens, and that feedback is taken, considered, and perhaps acted on when appropriate or reasonable. In the case of MGCR 294, this has occurred. The Department of Economics does not agree with the proposed course (even after the changes made to the course). However, an objection to a proposal does not mean it cannot go forward; rather, an objection is noted, considered, and on the record. It is also noted that Economics by no means needs to accept MGCR 294 as equivalent to ECON course(s). The course MGCR 294 is therefore approved. Secretary's comments/corrections: Economics should consider revising some of their courses to include a restriction that refers to MGCR 294, such as: ECON 209, ECON 295, ECON 330D1/D2, and ECON 352D1/D2.
