

SCHOOL OF SOCIAL WORK

Project Awards (Research, Service or Demonstration) and Field Education Awards

The School of Social Work has four available student Project Awards, funded by generous friends & graduates. Unlike scholarships or fellowships (for recruitment of incoming students) and prizes (for recognition of graduating students), these awards are intended to provide modest financial support for special projects undertaken by students during their social work programs:

Freda L. Paltiel Award (value: $1921.51):

For immigrant & minority women’s health & development
All Social Work students & faculty are eligible

Tryna Rotholz Annual Creative Award (value: $1318.08):

For social group work practice
Upper level social work students in good academic standing are eligible.

Joan Macfarlane Bailin Research Award (value: $1541.78):

For projects related to aging and/or the aged
Applicants must have completed one full year of study in the McGill School of Social Work.

Jane Harris Van-Gelder Award (value: $716.09):

For Social Work students to undertake activities in the area of social work and health including mental health.

There are also two Field Education Awards:

Theodora H. Lambert Award (value: $2,608.70):

For BSW, MSW and MScA-CFT students currently (2022-23) in practicum working with people with physical disabilities to attend a training or conference related to their field placement (ex. CASWE).

Shirley Pfefer Award (value: $394.43):

For a student at BSW, MSW, MScA-CFT level whose current (2022-23) field placement relates to palliative care (budget not required)
