This course will develop an understanding of contemporary North American Jewry using findings of sociology and other social sciences. Social, cultural, and political issues of concern to the Jewish community will be analyzed. The course will examine specific characteristics of Jewish life in Canada, and Quebec in particular, compared with the American Jewish experience.

Basic Texts (on reserve in the library: also from the bookstore)

1. Morton Weinfeld, Like Everyone Else But Different (this book is, alas, out of print, but is being reprinted and will be sold as a coursepack in the bookstore.)
2. A collection of additional readings, all required, is available bound for purchase at the bookstore as a coursepack and on reserve in the library.

Supplementary Texts

1. Daniel J. Elazar, Community and Polity, Jewish Publication Society, 1976. (There is now a second edition.)

Requirements

The course requirements are one research paper worth 33% and two exams worth 33% each. The paper should be a maximum length of 12 double spaced pages of text (excluding references, tables, footnotes, etc.). The research paper is due on the last class, and no later. This deadline is not flexible. Only a documented medical problem is an excuse for submitting a late paper. Joint papers (two people) are fine; then the maximum length is 15 pages.

The first examination will be a mid term. This exam will cover the first five sections of the course outline. The mid term will be in class and will be on Thursday Feb. 20. It will consist of short answer questions and one essay. The second examination will be multiple choice format. The second exam will not be cumulative, and will cover sections 6-10 of the course outline, and will take place during the formal examination period.
All the readings with an * are required. They are taken from the core texts and the selection of readings. Do not be frightened by the length of the reading list. The other items can be used as references for term papers.

Several resources are available for research on North American Jewry:

There are several acceptable websites for respectable Jewish think tanks or research institutes which are worth consulting, though these are not substitutes for but in addition to academic journals. These include The World Jewish Congress, the American Jewish Committee, the American Jewish Congress, the Anti-Defamation League of Bnai Brith, CLAL, Jerusalem Center for Public Affairs, the Canada Israel Committee, Center for Modern Jewish Studies at Brandeis University. Some of the papers they publish, if done by academics and scholars, are acceptable as academic references, especially if the subject is very current.

The Jewish Telegraphic Agency is a Jewish news service. See www.jta.org

The North American Jewish Data Bank is an organization through which you can get access to many reports, studies, and data sets.
There is also a search engine for journal articles in Jewish studies, many of which are social scientific in nature: Rambi

The Google search engine can be used to find many others.

There are also websites devoted to Jewish magazine articles and newspapers, many related to Israel.

The Israeli newspapers Haaretz and Jerusalem Post have English language websites.

There are also literally thousands of Jewish websites, on matters ranging from Talmud study to dating to Jewish study.

Material taken from serious think tank websites, or serious Jewish intellectual magazines like Commentary or Tikkun, and written by academics or recognized scholars, can be considered as academic and authoritative. But opinions and analyses expressed in articles in the popular Jewish press, or from magazines or newspapers, are not scholarly. But they can be used as examples or data in a paper.

Also consult all social scientific article data bases, using relevant keywords.
