

Tomlinson Science Graduate Teaching Fellows

This is an exceptional opportunity to learn more about Science Education, to work in a stimulating collaborative environment, and to develop your teaching, presentation and leadership skills. The Teaching Fellows are a dynamic group of graduate students in the Faculty of Science who are involved in a number of exciting activities, including (1) the development and delivery of several pedagogical workshops, (2) the development and implementation of educational research projects, and (3) support to the McGill teaching and learning community. New recruits benefit from exceptional training and development opportunities. As part of their training, during their first or second term in the group, new fellows are expected to take an education course centered around course design (EDPH 689) for which they will receive financial compensation equivalent to 90 hours at approximately $27 per hour.

Fellows typically invest a minimum of 50 hours per term in the project, for which they are compensated at approximately $27/hour. In the interest of building a sustainable program and professional workshop, priority will be given to candidates willing to make a commitment for a period of more than one academic year. Please note that your supervisor needs to be informed and approve of your decision to join TPULSE.
